1 Comment: My comments are as follows. First, there is only one completely undisturbed wilderness area left in Alaska. The area is host to lots of wildlife that is endangered and precious already. Second, the oil we get from fully functional Western oil fields is not cost effective when we factor in externality costs. For those of you who have not read Hawkings Ecology of Commerce, let me clarify. When all costs associated with the loss of wildlife and global warming plus oil spills are factored in just about THE ONE PLACE that is a no brainer not to destroy is a place like the ARCTIC WILDERNESS. Third, I speak for millions of Americans who are fed up with the Bush administrations assault on the environment. I am in favor of the new aggressive posture of environmental groups who sue govt. agencies for failure to follow their own mandates and statutes, and once again, millions of Americans concur. STAY OUT OF THE WESTERN ARCTIC or I will attempt to contact all the groups I am a member of and lobby then to pursue your agency on multiple criminal charges of negligent dereliction of your fiduciary duty to uphold the original intent of your agencies charter statutes.
